Colored Glass for Spectacles.

Adams is reported to have been the first to recommend the use of blue glass, but they were at first more widely used in Germany, chiefly through the recommendation of the great oculist Grafe, of Bohm, and others. The blue color of glass is chiefly to be recommended because it absorbs those rays in their passage which belong to the yellow and orange portion of the spectrum, in which the greatest brightness and greatest heat are concentrated, and the eyes, especially weak ones, consequently greatly protected by the blue color, while rays which such eyes are able to bear obtain access.

The material for blue glasses which has to be made in various shades to suit individual eyes, is somewhat less hard than that employed formerly for green spectacles and is also inferior in that respect to white glass, but it has gained in durability compassed with former descriptions of glass.

Still greater is the progress recorded in the manufacture and hardness of "smoked" glass, also used for protecting the eyesight. This kind of glass, which is colored gray or mouse colored by the addition of manganese, formerly suffered from too great softness by the addition of a large quantity of lead; but the best manufactures now made are nearly equal to white glass in point of hardness. The object of smoked glass is to reduce the glare of light without segregating colors.—Chambers' Journal.

Proper Mastication.

Proper mastication implies that the food be thoroughly chewed and mixed with the fluids of the mouth before being swallowed and that these functions be performed without haste. Most people eat as though they were ignorant of the fact that the stomach has no teeth or means of ensalivating the food with which they fill it. The stomach is a most faithful servitor and makes a long and earnest struggle to preserve its owner from the inevitable consequences of imposing upon it functions which nature intended should be performed by the teeth and the salivary glands; but, like the indulgence of a faithful mother or any other self sacrificing friend, its services are only recognized when it is unable to respond to demands for them.

Most people as they approach middle life lose many of their back teeth, which are the principal implements of mastication, but they fail to bear in mind that they should take more time at their meals in order to properly prepare their food for swallowing. They should remember that nature makes no allowance for their infirmities in this respect, but will hold them to a strict account for any neglect to observe the rules of health.—Washington Star.

Two Sorts of Boys.

First City Boy—I hope we won't take a country house again. I hate it.

Second City Boy—What! Hate the country?

"No, the country is good enough, but there's always a garden; and ma and pa go 'bout crazy over it, plantin things in the spring, and then, when the hot weather comes, they get tired and stop botherin 'bout it, and then the weeds come up, and then they always want me to weed gardea, 'cause it's good, healthful outdoor exercise for boys of my age. I hate it."

"Well, you're a chump. We have a garden every summer, too, but I don't do any weeding; not much I don't."

"Have you a gardener?"

"No."

"Then how do you get out of it."

"Well, you see, I never can learn the difference between weeds and other things, and by the time I've dug up a lot of flowers an veg'tables mother comes runnin out and says I ain't big enough to weed garden. Then I go fishin."—Good News.

Petticoat Red Men.

No one knows where an Indian is going. Traveling across the plain in a stage or an army ambulance you will see him afar off galloping as if he had been sent for the doctor and was afraid he wouldn't find him at home. Approaching you as the two paths cross he will usually rein up, exchange salutations, study your outfit closely, checking his pony to the slowest of walks, and without asking a question will know just where you are going, what you are going to do and what food you will probably give him if he calls upon you at your evening fire. Then he is off again, ranging easily in the saddle, and soon disappearing from sight. The land from which he came is as empty as that into which he has vanished. There is not a sign of human habitation in either direction. He has probably come twenty miles since dawn, and will, unless he concludes to camp with you, make another twenty before drawing rein.—Chicago Herald.

Irrelevant Theft.

An Arkansas man is seeking the passage of a law which shall punish what he calls "irrelevant theft" more severely than other species of larceny. The stealing of a valuable copy of Shakespeare by a teamster first moved him to advocate such a statute. Among other things he says:

"I would say nothing if a blacksmith were to steal a bellows, or if a plumber were to purloin a roll of lead pipe, but I do cry out in just denunciation when a carter, who couldn't read his name even if it were thrown with calcium light on the bosom of Lake Michigan, steals a rare volume of Shakespeare."—New York Recorder.

For scrofula in every form Hood's Sarsaparilla is a radical, reliable remedy. It has an unequalled record of cures.

IN AN EGYPTIAN APARTMENT HOUSE.

Interesting Scenes in a Lodging Place in the City of Cairo.

The two rooms nearest us belonged to El Azhar students, so Mustapha said. He could speak no English, but he imparted the information in Arabic to our dragoman. Seeing that we were more interested in the general scene than in his red jugs, Mustapha left the Assiout ware to its fate, and lighting a cigarette seated himself on the railing with a disengaged air, as much as to say: "Two more mad women! But it's nothing to me."

One of the students was evidently an ascetic. His room contained piles of books and pamphlets, and almost nothing else. His one rug was spread out close to the front in order to get the light, and placed upon it we saw his open inkstand, his pens and a page of freshly copied manuscript. When we asked where he was, Mustapha replied that he had gone down to the fountain to wash himself, so that he could say his prayers.

The second chamber belonged to a student of another disposition; this extravagant young man had three rugs; clothes hung from pegs upon his walls, and he possessed an extra pair of lemon colored slippers; in addition we saw cups and saucers upon a shelf. Only two books were visible, and these were put away in a corner; instead of books he had flowers; the whole place was adorned with them; pots containing plants in full bloom were standing on the floor round the walls of his largely exposed abode, and were also drawn up in two rows in the passageway outside, where he himself, sitting on a mat, was sewing. His blossoms were so gay that involuntarily we smiled. Whereupon he smiled too, and gave us a salam.

Opposite the rooms of the students there was a large chamber almost entirely filled with white bales, like small cotton bales; in a niche between these high piles an old man kneeling at the threshold was washing something in a large earthenware tub of a pink tint. His body was bare from the waist upward, and as he bent over his task his short chest, with all the ribs clearly visible, his long brown back with the vertebræ of the spine standing out, and his lean, seesawing arms looked skeleton-like, while his head, supported on a small wizened throat, was adorned with such an enormous bobbing turban, dark green in hue, that it resembled vegetation of some sort—a colossal cabbage. Directly behind him, also on the threshold, squatted a large gray baboon whose countenance expressed a fixed misanthropy.

Every now and then this creature who was secured by a long loose cord, ascended slowly to the top of the bales and came down on the other side, facing his master. He then looked deeply into the tub for several minutes, touched the water carefully with his small black hand, withdrew it and inspected the palm, and then returned gravely, and by the same roundabout way over the bales, to resume his position at the doorsill, looking as if he could not understand the folly of such unnecessary and silly toil.

In another chamber a large very black negro, dressed in pure white, was seated upon the floor, with his feet stretched out in front of him, his hands placed stiffly on his knees, his eyes staring straight before him. He was motionless; he seemed hardly to breathe.

"What is he doing?" I said to the dragoman.

"He? Oh, he berry good man; he pray."

In a chamber next to the negro two grave old Arabs were playing chess. They were perched upon one of those Cairo settees which look like square chicken coops. One often sees these seats in the streets, placed for messengers and porters, and for some time I took them for actual chicken coops, and wondered why they were always empty. Chickens might well have inhabited the one used by the chess players; for the central court upon which all these chambers opened was covered with a layer of rubbish and dirt several inches thick, which contained many of their feathers. —Constance Fenimore Woolson in Harper's.

Renting Bibles.

The popular impression that every family possesses a Bible as well as a dictionary and a copy of Shakespeare, like many other popular impressions, seems to be an erroneous one, for there is in town a firm that makes a business of renting out Bibles of an expensive and handsome kind, suitable to hand to a bishop or fashionable clergyman on the occasion of a christening, wedding or funeral in the family. If on the occasion of these religious episodes in the family the high church dignitary should turn to the blank leaves between the Old and New Testaments he would find them devoid of genealogical records, to the consternation of the family. A deposit is demanded when the Bible is hired, and a charge of two dollars a night is the regular price.—New York Sun.

Authors' Words.

A statistician in Paris has the patience to count the number of words employed by the most celebrated writers. The works of Corneille do not contain more than 7,000 different words, and those of Moliere 8,000. Shakespeare, the most fertile and varied of English authors, wrote all his tragedies and comedies with 15,000 words; Voltaire and Goethe employ 20,000. "Paradise Lost" only contains 8,000, and the Old Testament says all that it has to say with 5,642 words.—Cor. Baltimore American.

Taught a Lesson.

The folly of flirting with strange young men is cruelly plain to a girl who works in a local dry goods store, where every clerk has read a letter she wrote to a Worcester young man, who gave a fictitious name and address. The envelope contained the firm name in the corner, and when it was sent back unclaimed the letter had to go the rounds to find the writer.—Springfield Homestead.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

The agents of a certain publisher are now visiting our merchants soliciting patronage for a directory and as a means of securing such patronage are circulating a report that Moffat's Directory will not be issued this year. I need hardly remind business men that when a man has got to lie in order to get patronage that he will not hesitate to cheat. If I can only come across some of those agents I will put them out of the way ffor the directory season, and in the meantime I hope our Bloomfield merchants will show them the door.

Dear prices for clothing are just the reverse of our rule of figuring. We warrant customers for Men's or Boys' clothes or hats a reliability of make that is beyond question; and we are safe to assume that our prices are the lowest.

We thoroughly test material and linings before making, and every seam and sewing afterward. Another advantage of dealing with us, is our abundance of assortment.

All purchases sent, or taken out of our store carry a guarantee with them, that, if the customer is dissatisfied in any way, we either exchange the goods, or refund the money. We cheerfully defer to the customer's preference in every instance.
